In-Camera Focus Control Nowadays, most cameras have a _focus assist_ feature. This allows you to use autofocus in the camera and see on the monitor whether the subject is properly focused, as shown in Figure 3-4. Focus assist is useful for action shooting because it tells you whether the subject is being properly focused on. FIGURE 3-4: If you see a green arrow next to a subject in the viewfinder, you're in focus; otherwise, the image is out of focus. If you don't have focus assist, you can manually focus the camera. Figure 3-5 shows the in-camera focus scale. FIGURE 3-5: To view in-camera focus information, go to Shooting Menu 1, and then turn on the Focusing/Zoom Assist and Focus peaking features. To adjust the in-camera focus, follow these steps: 1. **Press the Live View button to launch the Live View screen.** 2. **Turn on Autofocusing/Zoom Assist by pressing the Live View button again.** 3. **Rotate the Main dial to change the focusing scale and then press the OK button to lock in the new scale.** You can also adjust the in-camera focus manually: 1. **Focus on your subject and adjust the distance as needed to keep the image sharply focused.** Remember that you want to keep the subject

This article is about becoming a Photoshop expert. The video series on our YouTube channel are a great way to learn Photoshop. The tutorials are designed for beginners who are interested in learning the foundations of Photoshop. Our How To Videos have over 30,000 views, so they are one of the most popular resources on the Internet for learning to edit photos. If you've used Photoshop before but don't use it for editing photos, these videos on Photoshop tutorials are a great place to start. You can learn to edit photos, enhance portraits, edit business and wedding photos and edit images using our How To Videos. Before we get started, let's take a look at some of the features of Photoshop. What's in your Photoshop collection? You should look through the three main tabs in Photoshop Elements – Photo, Photoshop and Web. The Photo tab is where you store all of the images that you import. The Photoshop tab is where you store your photos with all of the settings applied. The Web tab is where you upload images from your computer or from the web. Some of the options in the Photo tab are: Open: Images that you import in Photoshop Elements. Documents: All documents that you create in Photoshop Elements. My Files: All of the imported and edited photos that you have saved. Layers: A good overview of the different layers in a photo. The Layers panel is where you hide and unhide all of the different layers in an image. Colors: The RGB, CMYK and Grayscale color options. Size: Size adjustments for the image when you increase and decrease the size. Effects: Image effects. Gamma: Gamma adjustments. Sharpen: Image sharpening. Crop: Cropping an image. Grow: Growing an image. Guides and other: Other features. Organize: How to get a better overview of your pictures in the Organizer. The Organizer gives you quick access to the most used images and a speedier way to sort your pictures. You can see more details of the Photo tab in our article on How To Organize Your Photos. The Photoshop tab is where you store all of your images, whether they have been imported from your computer or from the Internet. You can see how to navigate Daniel looks forward to helping you achieve your goals.[Sustained angina pectoris: coronary microvascular flow reserve abnormalities and myocardial viability]. To determine the diagnostic value of coronary microvascular function and myocardial viability. Seven patients with exertional angina were studied with 99mTc-sestamibi SPECT/CT, MRI/MRA and fractional flow reserve (FFR) measurement with an adenosine-induced hyperemia of the left anterior descending coronary artery (LAD). The patients underwent exercise stress testing, stress thallium SPECT, stress magnetic resonance myocardial perfusion imaging and adenosine-induced FFR measurement. Patients were diagnosed as coronary artery disease (CAD) or non-CAD if FFR was  $\leq 0.80$  or  $> 0.80$ , respectively. Seventeen segments were related to the diagnosis (hyperemia in 11 segments and ischemia in seven). Exertional angina due to fixed CAD was considered when FFR and/or stress thallium SPECT and/or stress magnetic resonance myocardial perfusion imaging was positive. FFR, stress thallium SPECT and stress magnetic resonance myocardial perfusion imaging had a sensitivity of 90%, 50% and 82%, respectively; specificity of 100%, 98% and 89%, respectively; and accuracy of 94%, 91% and 94%, respectively, for the diagnosis of CAD. When hyperemia had a sensitivity of 100% and accuracy of 91%, LAD stenosis  $\geq 70\%$  was considered. CAD was considered when adenosine-induced hyperemia revealed FFR  $\leq 0.80$ . Microvascular function abnormalities, a worse clinical evolution and ischemia were more frequent in patients with CAD (p

[Treatment strategies for metastatic renal cell carcinoma: who will benefit from and who will not benefit from IFN-alpha?]. Renal cell carcinoma (RCC) is a malignant neoplasm with a high risk of distant metastases. The most frequent sites of metastasis are the lung, liver, and bone. It is still unclear whether patients with metastatic RCC should be treated with the antitumor agent interferon-alpha (IFN-alpha). This retrospective analysis aimed to determine patient characteristics, patient survival and response rate after IFN-alpha therapy for metastatic RCC, and to compare the efficacy and toxicity of different treatment strategies in patients with metastatic disease. 31 patients treated with IFN-alpha for metastatic RCC were evaluated. The median age was 54 years (range, 28-81). 23/31 patients (74%) had a clear cell histology and 5/31 patients (16%) a non-clear cell histology. 25/31 (81%) had a Karnofsky performance status (KPS) of  $\geq 80$ . The median follow-up for living patients was 26 months (range 3-107 months). 2/31 (6%) patients achieved partial response (PR), 7/31 (23%) stable disease (SD), 7/31 (23%) progressive disease (PD) and 17/31 (55%) had died during follow up (11 PR, 3 SD, 3 PD, 1 no response). Median time to progression was 8 months (range, 2-52 months). 12/31 (38%) patients could be retreated with IFN-alpha after documented disease progression. 15/31 (48%) had a treatment-free interval (TFI) longer than 12 months and 9/31 (29%) had a TFI of  $> 24$  months. 5/31 (16%) patients received a total of more than 20 IFN-alpha treatments and no cumulative toxicity was observed. 2/3 PR patients had a long TFI (48 months and 26 months) with subsequent SD on retreatment. In our study the majority of patients with metastatic RCC achieved long-term disease-free survival after IFN-alpha treatment. Thus, it seems not justified to omit any further treatment after IFN-alpha in patients with stable disease.COX-2 gene expression in tumor and stromal cells of human colorectal cancer.
